From waiter to head chef

Levon Sargsyan is 40 and the head chef at Café Ararat in Yerevan. He was born in Gyumri in 1986 and grew up there. His mother was a cook, and Levon helped her in the kitchen every day. At school his favourite subject was art. He failed his English exam when he was 16.

Levon left school at 18 and got a job as a waiter in a hotel. He worked there for three years. In 2007 he moved to London and did a two-year cooking course at a college. He practised English every day and improved a lot. After that, he worked in two restaurants in London.

Ten years ago, Levon came back to Yerevan and bought a café near the station. Finally, in 2020, he opened Café Ararat. Now he teaches young cooks there.
